2. How does Percy's mood change on page 229? Use two details from the story to support your response.

Possible Exemplary Response:

Percy's mood changes from anger to weariness on page 229. At first, Percy is angry with Ares, the god of war. Ares requested that Percy help him get his shield back. Ares' presence alone is enough to irritate Percy, but he also does not want to help Ares because they have their own quest and because Ares is a bully who threatens innocent humans like their waitress. However, when Ares leaves the diner, his hold over Percy's emotions dissipates. Then, Percy is left feeling dejected and weary. He still doesn't know what has happened to his mother.
