Reflection Of Racial Injustices

My name is Angela Tuyishime and i am going to be talking about Reflection Of Racial Injustices. So i just want to say that it's not fair people are treating black people differently, and they think that it doesn't hurt their feelings when they treat them differently but it does. And this has been going on and on for a long time and it is not fair for black people to feel that way. They make them feel like they have to change to fit in but they don't they don't need anyone to tell them what they can or can't do.

Black lives matter it doesn't matter what race you are how old you are and what your skin color is, you still have to treat people the way you want to be treated. And also this use to happen back in the days when there were slavery and when people use to bully black people for their own skin color. and today some of them are still treating them like slaves.

And i feel like they have the right to fight back because they have been killing their brothers and sisters and they have the right to stand up for them. With everything that is happening right know is not okay they shouldn't be stealing stuff and bruing thing, i know they are angry but there are other way you can gave peace.

we are really thankful for the people that is on our side and at the end of the day all lives matter and they should treat people how they want to be treated.
