

What is Social Distancing?

A Social Skills Story by Ms. Debbie

I know how much space I need by making a circle.

I stand up, lift my arms straight out, and spin in a circle.

Inside the circle is my “circle space”.

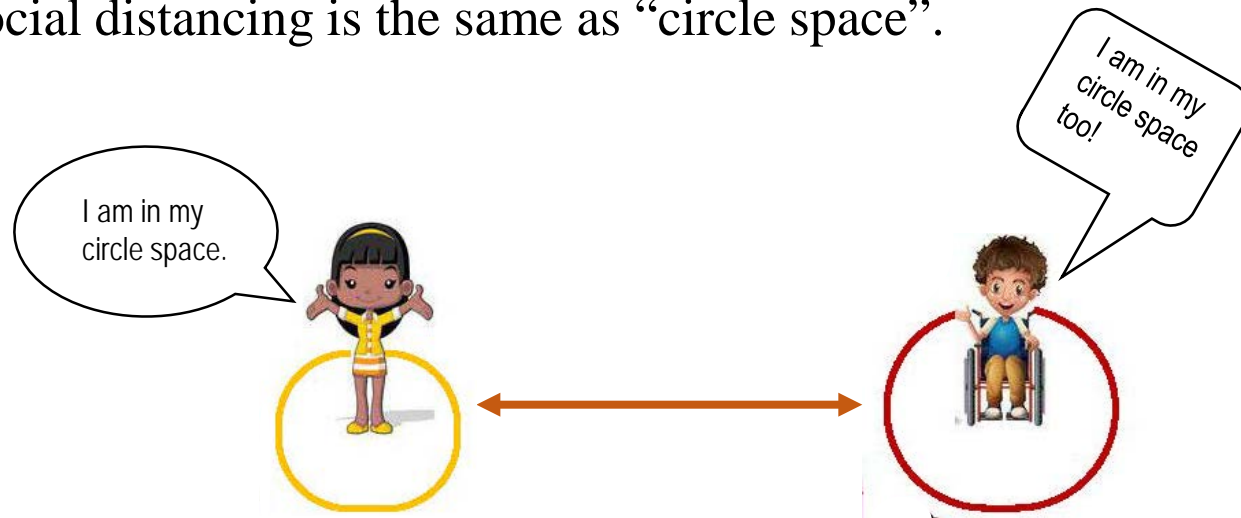

Coronavirus is making a lot of people sick.
I have a new rule to follow to stay healthy.

The new rule is called “social distancing”.
Social distancing means that all people stay in their own circle space and don’t enter another person’s circle space.

Social distancing is the same as “circle space”.

My circle space stays with me everywhere I go.

My circle space stays with me when I ride my bike.

My circle space stays with me when I go to the store.

My circle space stays with me when I see my friends.
My friends have circle space too!

Hello friend!

Nice to see you!

We are good at circle space.

I will follow the circle space rule anytime I am not at home.

I will follow the circle space rule at the park and at the grocery store.

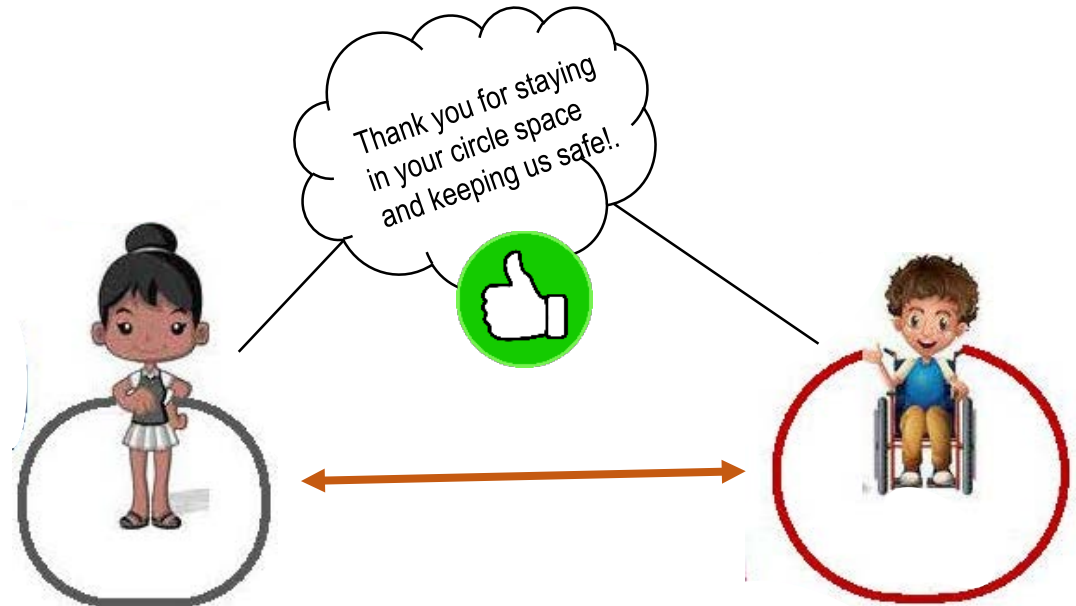

I will follow the circle space rule with kids and with adults.

It is okay for the people I live with to enter my circle space.

It is okay for me to enter the circle space of people I live with.

I will respect other people's circle space by staying in my own circle space.

Staying in my circle space will help to stop the spread of coronavirus.

The circle space rule is important so that everyone can stay healthy.

I will follow the “social distancing” rule by staying in my own circle space.
